

Year of Languages¹ Attitudinal and Aptitudinal Overview of Language in Granada (Andalusia), Spain and Birmingham (Alabama), USA

Brittlynn Hall, McNair Scholar
Sheri Spaine Long, Ph.D.

To Summarize
para resumir

Introduction introducción

- ACTFL and the U.S. Senate have designated 2005 as the "Year of Languages" (Res. 28)²
- The EU promoted a similar initiative in 2001
- Within two cities of comparable size-- Birmingham, Alabama and Granada, Spain--how is a foreign language treated?

City proper population 237,663 (2003)

Percentage of Affirmative vs. Negative Responses Granada and Birmingham el porcentaje de respuestas afirmativas vs. las negativas

- 30.67% more English speakers were unable to respond
- 4.33% more Spanish speakers displayed animosity than English speakers

Discussion discusión

This investigation was done in order to better clarify the language needs of our society through comparison to the sociolinguistic makeup of a Spanish-speaking community.

Birmingham monolingualism appears to derive from provincialism

Granada animosity due to greater exposure to
1) English (education, popular culture, tourism) and 2) religious linguicentrism

Materials and Methods materias y métodos

- 600 random members from Spanish and English communities (300 from each)
- Three locations in each respective study sample: place of recreation, campus, shopping center.
- Spanish community: Ask in English (without physical cue): "Perdona. What time is it?"
- English community: Ask in Spanish (without physical cue): "Excuse me. ¿Qué hora es?"

Negative Responses (Granada vs. Birmingham) las respuestas negativas

"Animosity" includes rude looks, comments, or blatant apathy. "Other" includes preoccupation or confusion

Affirmative Responses (Granada vs. Birmingham) las respuestas afirmativas

"Other" includes gestures and answers given in a third language. More native tongue responses vs. foreign language (scaled to 175 from 300)

References referencias

- American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages. "Year of Languages." <http://www.actfl.org/i4a/pages/Index.cfm?pageid=359>. Accessed March 2005.
- Dodd, et al. Res 28, 109th Cong, 1st Sess., 2004.

Acknowledgments agradecimientos

- McNair Program through UAB Graduate Affairs
- Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures
- Dr. Sheri Spaine Long
- Dr. Fran Carriscondo